

SURFACE DESIGN SHOW 2007 MYKON

Mykon's stand this year has been designed in partnership with Green Graphite. The collaboration came about as Mykon has begun to explore the external uses for their panels, partitions and flooring and they will highlight this move forward by showcasing a specially designed water feature.

The Mykon stand has a layout which allows the visitor to explore the versatility of Mykon's products and alongside the water feature, Mykon will also be showcasing a new translucent material, Iris, which will become part of the Mykon colour series range.

The Surface Design Show was launched in 2003 to address the evolving needs of time-challenged architects and specifiers. Within a marketplace of general building, interior design and sector specific events, The Surface Design Show focuses on the interior shell and external building envelope and this year has attracted an audience of over 4,000 people.
